FREE READING ROOM AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

South Siders Delighted at Informal Opening Saturday Night—Non-Residing Applicants From Bur-rowers of Books—Largest Opening Will Follow Soon.

The reading room of the public library, at the corner of Main street and 2nd avenue north, was opened to the public on Saturday night from 7:30 to 9:30. About a hundred persons, mostly South Siders, visited the reading room and all had words of praise and thankfulness for the library board. The citizens of the South side, who by their votes some months ago decided to go ahead and build and equip a library independent of a land title, from Andrew Carnegie are also to be congratulated, for otherwise this library would not now be.

The citizens will perhaps feel all the more, while in the library when they realize that it is their own hard-earned money paid in taxes from year to year that has made such a utility possible.

Revenue in Common Sense.
The public library, though one of the municipal utilities, will not pay dividends in dollars and cents, since it is to be absolutely free to citizens.

For Ladies and Young Girls.
The reading room is divided into three compartments—general, ladies, and young girls. In each room, on tables, racks and shelves will be placed a carefully selected variety of books, magazines and periodicals.

Across the centre of the building is the counter behind which the librarian and his staff are now waiting, ready to receive applications for non-resident cards.

Those interested in the social welfare of the community will now be glad that at the public library will be a place where the young men can go and find pleasure of a different type than that found at a pool-room or a barroom. The doors of the public library will swing wide open with a welcome for all from 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. on week days. The library board has not yet decided the Sunday question.

BIG EPIDEMIC OF FORGERIES SWEEPS OVER

at the bank and paid in cash, but for the larger business were necessitated by means of what is alleged to have been an exceptionally clever forger, named, it is alleged, posing as a man of means, visited several real estate offices in the city, and upon finding a piece of property which he thought he would like to acquire, announced his intention to pay for the same in cash. He would then, it is said, produce check for a larger amount than the purchase price of the property, hand it to the real estate dealer, and receive in exchange the title deeds of the property and the balance of the check in cash. This is alleged to have been done in several instances.

A local card-writer is said to have written out the bodies of the checks, under instructions, but denies all responsibility for the signatures, and there is understood to be no imputation against him in connection with the matter.

Another in Custody.
Another man is said to be in custody at the police station, charged with complicity in the affair.

An interesting coincidence in connection with the matter is that prior to the cashing of the forged checks at the bank, an Edmonton firm who do business with the railway contractor in question, phoned to the Merchants' bank, stating that the contractor would make a deposit in the immediate future, and that he had issued checks in the meantime. The deposit was made, but, as it happened, the forged checks were presented before the genuine ones, otherwise they might not have been cashed without inquiry.

Mr. Fraser stated last night that the bank did not expect to lose any money over the transaction. The bank will claim the title deeds of the real estate purchased by the prisoner, and also the money found on his person at the time of his arrest.

Forgeries of Land Titles.
That there has been forgery of land titles in the province, and that some of the forged documents have been hypothecated to two of the Alberta branches of the Royal Bank as collateral for monetary advances, was the information supplied to the Bulletin last night from a reliable source.

The evidence, however, does not possess such wide ramifications as was at first supposed, and the amount of money secured from the banks is comparatively small.

Of course, of course, there is always the possibility that other cases may come to light, but so far, and it is thought by the authorities that there are none to report.

Two titles of land were forged. One was hypothecated to the branch of the Royal Bank at Stettin, and the other to the branch of the Royal Bank at Lacombe. Not more than the sum of five hundred dollars was secured from the banks in all, and possibly not that amount.

Both for Same Quarter Section.
The peculiar part of the affair is that both the titles referred to were of the same quarter section of land, south-east of Edmonton, and as a matter of fact, the land title office does not issue two titles relating to the same piece of property, and as the titles were deposited at different banks, this fact was apparently known to those parties who secured the money.

Beyond the fact that the titles were forged on the official paper of the land title office, and bore what purported to be the Government seal, they contained very little to lead anyone connected with the interior working of the office to suppose that they were really genuine. The titles purported to have been issued in 1903, and the name of George Roy, the then registrar, was affixed to the bottom of each document, but no attempt was even made to imitate the signature of Mr. Roy. The minor details of the documents also showed that the parties who forged them were not familiar with the office routine.

Detective Working.
It is understood that a detective has been placed on the case and is working in conjunction with the attorney general's department. While the amount involved in these two cases is comparatively small, the fact that land title documents have been forged and successfully hypothecated to banking institutions is one that calls for the strictest inquiry and relentless energy on the part of the police authorities in bringing the guilty parties to book, and it is believed that the case is being left untended in an effort to thoroughly sift the matter.

Forgery Case in Edmonton.
Still another remarkable case is stated to be engaging the attention of the local police. According to information in possession of the Bulletin, a certain individual went recently to a local firm of lawyers, and had a certain piece of property, which appeared to be genuine enough, asked for evidence of identification. The applicant promptly left, to return a short time later with another man, who is alleged to have said that he knew the applicant in question, and being the owner of the property referred to.

The firm thereupon executed the mortgage asked for and handed him the sum of one thousand dollars, the amount called for in the mortgage. Subsequent inquiry, however, revealed the fact that the man was not the owner of the property at all, nor was he what he represented himself to be.

A warrant has therefore been issued for his arrest, which is expected shortly. The second man is said to be in the city.
